1. demonstrate knowledge of European Cultures from ca.400-1450 CE in the area of Religious life, Intellectual culture, Political thought, Literary expression, the Visual Arts, and Social History.
2. demonstrate aspects of intellectual empathy. Historical analysis requires that the historian be able to think in terms of perspectives or mentalities contemporaneous to the analysis subject and different than her own. In trying to understand cultural artifacts, it is natural to relate the facts of the text so far as possible to one’s own knowledge and experience. In trying to understand historical persons and events, one must transcend the limits of personal experience and seek to place oneself, imaginatively, in the situation of others.
3. demonstrate skill in analyzing cultural artifacts including artworks and written works. This is the core of any ‘historical method’.
