The course requires effectively reasoned and supported essays including an argumentative research paper.

B. COURSE EFFECTIVE DATES: 06/01/1998 - Present

C. OUTLINE OF MAJOR CONTENT AREAS

1. Continued practice with the writing process (prewriting, composing, revising, editing, and proofreading)
2. Rhetorical analysis of selected readings as well as students' own writing
3. Development of carefully focused and organized academic essays
4. Rhetorical strategies for persuasion and argument
5. The research process
 - a. Selecting a topic and identifying the related issues
 - b. Drafting search questions
 - c. Designing a research plan
 - d. Locating, analyzing, evaluating and synthesizing sources
 - e. Integrating sources through summary, paraphrase, and quotation
 - f. Documenting sources using a standard formatting and citation style
6. Review grammar, punctuation, spelling, and mechanics

D. LEARNING OUTCOMES (General)

1. Develop effective essays
 - a. By practicing writing as a process of discovering, planning, drafting, revising, editing, and proofreading
 - b. By selecting information to support a thesis clearly, concisely, and logically
2. Read analytically both published texts and students' texts, including their own (i.e., identify the thesis, analyze support and evaluate the effectiveness of the writing for the purpose and audience)
3. Recognize and direct writing to a particular audience for a particular purpose; solve writing problems by
 - a. Identifying a purpose or goal
 - b. Describing the audience's assumptions and expectations
 - c. Selecting from a variety of writing strategies the methods appropriate for meeting the writing goal
 - d. Make language choices appropriate to their audience and context; these choices include consideration of diction, tone, consistent point of view, and style
4. Use grammar, punctuation, spelling, and mechanics correctly
5. Recognize the basic strategies of persuasion and argument and apply these to specific writing assignments that address a variety of purposes and audiences
6. Use various information-gathering techniques (including library research, electronic sources, interviews, and/or observation) to obtain evidence which they can then use to support their assertions in their argumentative essays and research papers
7. Analyze and evaluate sources to identify the writer's authority, purposes, target audiences, biases, assumptions, and reasoning. Based on these analyses, students will select those sources most appropriate as support for their own assertions.
8. Represent sources in their own writing through accurate summaries, paraphrases, and direct quotations
9. Cite and document sources correctly utilizing a style format such as MLA
