A. COURSE DESCRIPTION

Credits: 4
Lecture Hours/Week: 1
Lab Hours/Week: 6
OJT Hours/Week: .
Prerequisites: None
Corequisites: None

This course provides learning experiences in personal training, semi-private training, and group exercise. Emphasis will be placed on understanding the process, considerations, and philosophies involved in the design and implementation of fitness training programs. A featured activity is the practice client program, which provides students opportunities to design and implement health/fitness related programs for individuals and small groups. All aspects of client interaction will be practiced, including consultation, goal-setting, assessment, specific program design, exercise instruction, program review and update. Students will also take part in a community-based group exercise program of their choice. Interactive activities will provide hands-on experience in relationship building and use of interpersonal skills. Students are allowed significant autonomy and responsibility to achieve the goals of the class, including scheduling and organization of events. Classroom activities and instructor meetings include analysis of student created programs for specific clients and sharing experiences gathered through program activities.
